A History of Performance

Why Choose VersiGard EPDM?

Versico is proud to provide its customers with advanced roofing solutions; a commitment to quality and innovation means decades have been spent improving upon existing products and developing new product lines. However, one thing that has remained constant over the years is the watertight performance, dependability, and durability of VersiGard EPDM membranes. No other single-ply roof system has a track record or a history that matches that of EPDM, which is why it remains the low-slope roofing industry's material of choice.

Built to Last

- EPDM provides unmatched weatherability
- EPDM expands and contracts, which makes it ideal for various climatic conditions; it is virtually immune to freeze/thaw cycles, ozone, and UV radiation
- Installation, maintenance, and overall lifecycle costs are low
- UV resistance of 41,580 kJ/m<sup>2</sup> leads the industry

Time, Labor & Cost Savings

- A wider variety of sheet thicknesses and widths compared to thermoplastic membranes allows for faster installations
- Dozens of VersiGard EPDM membranes are available with factory-applied Quick-Applied Tape (VersiGard QAT), which greatly reduces seaming time and improves seam quality and consistency
- Quick-applied, prefabricated accessories are available for virtually any penetration or detail
- Ballasted stormwater retention systems are a low-cost alternative to retention ponds or system upgrades

A History of Performance

EPDM for Sustainability

- Ballasted systems qualify as cool roof alternatives
- EPDM offers the lowest global warming potential, acid rain and smog impact, according to a study using the EPA's TRACI model
- Non-reinforced EPDM is recyclable, and recycling EPDM can help a building owner earn credits toward LEED® certification

Numbers Don't Lie

- Versico has over 40,000 warranted EPDM roof systems installed throughout the U.S.
- Versico has more than 500 million square feet of warranted EPDM roof systems installed throughout the U.S.

Versico can help you protect your roofing investment with warranties ranging from 5 to 30 years on your EPDM system.
